

The New Jersey version of the "Do Not Call List" works. Ever since I subscribed to it, the number of unwanted solicitations has decreased substantially. There is no need to change or restrict our law by any Federal intervention. The only improvement might be to require each incoming caller to be identified by name in addition to their telephone number, which could be detected by "caller ID". We still get a few calls displaying telephone numbers only or the notation of "out of area". But we can deal with this. If the call is legitimate, they usually leave a message. If not, they hang up after the 3rd ring.

I say, "If it is not broken, don't fix it."
